MESSRS, WHITAKER AND HERVEY

Before the Ohio County Republican Clab Last Evening-Both Speakers Make Effective Addresses, Giving Particular Attention to the Tariff Mislegislation of the Democracy. The Earnestness of the Campaign is Shown.

The large hall of the Ohio County Republican club was well filled last evening, the occasion being an open meeting, the principal features of which were the unusually good addresses by Hon, H. C. Hervey, of Wellsburg, and Hon. N. E. Whitaker, the candidate for the state senate. As is found to be the case in all of the Republican meetings this fall, the audience showed an earnestness to a degree not found in previous political campaigns. The pertinent questions put by the two speakers of the evening were answered in the faces and in the minds of the audience, and if the surface indications go for anyif the surface indications go for anything it can be prophesied without fear of the result that every man who attended this meeting—and most of them were workingmon—will walk up to the polls and cast his ballot. What that ballot will be could be easily guessed from the amount of applause given Mr. Hervey when he counseled the importance this year of putting it in straight. Among people who are in themselves examples of the disastrous effects of Democratic domination, principles are the all-important thing; personalities Democratic domination, principles are the all-important thing; personalities go for little or nothing.

The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock by Chairman James K. Kall, of the county executive committee, who reminded those present that to-day is the last day on which voters can be lasted at the rooms of the county commissioners in the public building. He urged that all voters who are not yet listed attend to this important matter. The assessors will be at the commissioners' rooms during the morning and evening.

Mr. Hall then introduced the speaker of the evening, Hon. H. C. Hervey, of Wellsburg, who opened by saying that the Republicans should heed the warning of the chairman. This is a Republican year and every Republican should want to be one of those who are going to vote the Democracy into retirement. One important matter is that every Republican shall see that the straight ticket is elected from Captain Dovener [applause] to the lowest office that is to be voted for. The present state senator should be returned [applause] not because it will add to the distinction of Mr. Whitaker, but because the secate needs him. This equality applies to the four legislative candidates. The reason they shall receive your solid support is because the country needs the Republicant because the recording to respect to the country needs the Republicant and the secants of the result of the country needs the Republicant and the secants of the result of the country needs the Republicant and the secants of the result of they shall receive your sold allowed the Ropublican party, because it represents sound principles. Because some one on the other ticket is a "good fellow" should not have a bearing this fall; principles alone should be considered.

not have a bearing this tait; principles alone should be considered.

Mr. Hervey then addressed himself in a plain but convincing manner that set his hearers to thinking. Recalling the campaign of two years ago the speaker referred to the multitude of promises that were a feature of the Democratic plan of action. The people listened to those promises and the country was turned over completely to the Democratic party—they were in entire possession. Their day of opportunity had come and is still here. After wrestling over a year with tariff reform the tarif bill is a law. Whose bill is it? Who owns to its authorship? Mr. Wilson, the Democratic tariff reformer, in introducing the senatate bill to the house, ducing the senatate bill to the house, did not praise it. Mr. Cleveland thought it not good enough to receive his signature. Do the senators from West Virginia stand for this bill? No, they do not; but it is the best thing the Democracy could accomplish.

What has been the result? If it has bettered the country, all right; but, on the other hand, if it has worked for the country's injury it deserves our condemnation. That it has worked out the country's injury he very clearly showed. The caiamities of the last eighteen months have not been without effect. Politics has been brought down to a business basis. The former belief that politics was a diversion has been rudely dispelled. It has been shown that political issues affect business. In fact, the government is shown to be a silent partner in every man's business. The question of economic principles has been brought home to every voter. The speaker gave figures showing the workmen of this country have lost $160,000.000 by reason of the diastrous polity pursued by the party in power. Isn't it time to determine whether we want this condition of affairs to cease? Don't we want to get back to the old times—not the old Democratic times of the fifties, but back to the prosperity of 1892, that now is but a memory. The speaker's comparison of the number of paupers in 1859, under Democratic rule, and in 1890, under Republican countrol, was a distinct hit and evoked applause.

Mr. James K. Hall gave an interesting comparison of the business attitudes of the two candidates for the state senate. Last spring Mr. Pollock, the Democratic rule, and in 1890, under Republican countrol, was a distinct hit and evoked applause.

Mr. James K. Hall gave an interesting comparison of the business attitudes of the two candidates for the state senate. Last spring Mr. Pollock, the Democratic rule, and in 1890, under Republican countrol, was a distinct hit and evoked a burst of applause.]

Mr. Whitaker thanked the audience for the warm welcome extended him, and eaid it encouraged him in t duty to protect the rights and the color his people.

The tarill question has been discussed over and over, but we have never before been brought so close to actual results as we are to-day. We have had two years of experience—an object leason, which has not yet onded. The time is at hand when we must decide whether we want the present cylls to whisher we want the present cylls to continue, or whether we want a return to the prosperity that marked the pro-tective policy of the Republican party. The speaker urged careful consideration of the issues and a united effort on the part of the voters to right things-tion of the issues and a united effort on the part of the voters to right things—at the ballot box.

He referred to the unaccountable iandslide of '92 together with its endless chain of evils, which must be corrected in an active canyass and a full vote in November. The good work can be continued for two years more, when a national election takes place.

That portion of the talk referring to the repeal of the Sherman silver law, the Democratic bugaboo meant to disguise the real ills of the country, was especially good. The real trouble was that every man was afraid of every other man; there was no confidence in the Democratic party, which had complete control of the government.

The speaker called attention to the assertion of the Democratic press and leaders that what has thus far been accomplished in the way of tariff reform is but a beginning; that a more radical tariff bill will be passed by the next Congress, which they hope will be Democratic. Are we to contribute to the success of the avowed programme of the Democratic? Our interests are linked together and they must be felt at the polls next month. Our interests are not in touch with Democratic policy; this our experience has taught us clearly enough.

Mr. Whitaker's rebuke of the course of the West Virginia senators and representatives was scathing and severe. They have violated every interest they represent and prostituted themselves to the crack of the party lash.

The industries of this country are here to stay, whether Democratic or Republican principles prevail—on a different basis, however. If Democratic principles are here to stay the laboring man's wares will stay down; if the Republican tariff policy prevails the wage-enrare will receive the benefit. That is the cituation in a nutabell.

Series at a Very Reasonable Price. One Free Introductory Lecture Will be Given Next Tuesday Evening in the I. O. O. P. Hall-Plan of the Movement and its Objects.

Steps have been set on foot looking to the introduction here of the University Extension movement. On next Tuesday evening, October 9, Prof. Lyman P. Powell will deliver an introductory lecture in the L. O. O. F. hall, his theme being "Washington and Lincoln." This popular discourse will be illustrated with stereopticon views and portraits by Prof. A. M. Stevenson, of the Madison schools. Superintendent of Schools Anderson, Mr. F. W. Baumer and other local people are interested in this popular movement for the higher education of the masses. The only cost for the opening lecture will be a very reasonable charge for the hall.

University extension, as a formally organized educational agency, has had a history in this country of a little over two years. Prior to that time scarcely anyone in America could have explained its object or given any idea of its method. Both have now been made fa-miliar by active introduction into scores of communities and by the dis-tribution of the organizing circulars of the American socioty for the entension of university teaching.

Many who understand in a general way that university extension means university courses by university men before popular audiences, are in uncertainty concerning uninor though essential details of the scheme and will be more readily convinced of its practicability if such details are made clear.

First, then, the extension lecturers are men who know their subjects. This are men who know their subjects. This is guaranteed by their connection with some known college or university which becomes responsible for the extension courses in the same manner and to the same extent that it does for the courses given by the same instructor and his given by the same instructor and his associates within the college walls. Secondly, no specific previous prepar-ation is expected. The lectures are de-livered to an audience as miscellaneous livered to an audience as iniscenaneous as that which assembles at church, or as that which the street car conductor addresses when he calls out the names of the streets. It is the business of the university extension lecturer to make his course intelligible to the untrained, and at the same time interestions are absolute to students who are ing and valuable to students who are already trained to careful methods of Thirdly, the basis of the course is a

Thirdly, the basis of the course is a series of six lectures on the given subject, a printed outline of which is given in the lecturer's syllabus. The lecture is about an hour in length, and the series is given at weekly intervals on, the same evening of each week.

There are also classes and weekly exercises, but these need not be taken unless desired. Mr. Powell, who gives the trial lecture here, has met with great popular success elewhere, and ought to be warmly welcomed by all friends of education in Wheeling. cation in Wheeling.
